Advancing Land Change Modeling's recommendations for assessment of future data and research needs will enable model outputs to better assist the science, policy, and decision support communities. Topics

Advancing Land Change Modeling: Opportunities and Research

Advancing Land Change Modeling: Opportunities and Research Requirements describes various LCM approaches, suggests guidance for their appropriate application, and makes recommendations to improve the integration of observation strategies into the models. This report provides a summary and evaluation of several modeling approaches, and their ...

Opportunities for advancing the infrastructure to support land-change modeling include the development of: (1) a consistent infrastructure for documenting and sharing models and software; (2) a data infrastructure that provides access to a common set of data resources for running and validating models; and (3) a consistent and widely adopted community modeling and governance infrastructure.

Based on modeling results, it appears clearly that climate change might have an impact on carbon stock at horizon 2070 by decreasing the storage capacity of various land units which are currently suitable. The decrease was more important under HadGEM2-ES (90.0%) and less under MPI-ESM-MR (89.4%).

Modeling climate change adaptation in forestry and pasture land use, like adaptation modeling for many sectors, consists of two modeling stages: estimation of the future biophysical implications of climate change (e.g., changes in growth and disturbance regimes), and modeling of economic responses to the biophysical changes.
