Kant's Inaugural Dissertation of 1770 - Wikisource, the

The main focus of this chapter is Kant's On the form and principles of the sensible and intelligible world (the Inaugural Dissertation). It shows that this work, which marked a radical shift in Kant's thought from the writings of the 1760s, was the first fruit of the "great light" that he received in 1769, which led to the sharp separation of sensibility and understanding as distinct cognitive powers.
